Lessons from the Holocaust: The Journey from Victim to Survivor

Dr. Anna Ornstein

Dr. Anna Ornstein is the author of My Mother’s Eyes: Holocaust Memories of a Young Girl. During the Nazi occupation of Hungary in 1944, Dr. Ornstein and her mother were among hundreds of thousands of Hungarian Jews deported to Auschwitz. The Jewish Book World described her memoir as a “beautifully designed, delicately illustrated, impressionistic narration, which conveys a child’s acceptance if not comprehension of everything that is transpiring.” Dr. Ornstein will speak on processes of mourning and journeys of recovery after the Holocaust.

Dr. Ornstein is a psychoanalyst and emerita professor of child psychiatry at the University of Cincinnati. She is a graduate of the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis, a Training and Supervising analyst at the Cincinnati Psychoanalytic Institute and a Supervising Analyst at the Boston Psychoanalytic Society & Institute (BPSI). Dr. Ornstein's publications range from articles on the interpretive process in psychoanalysis and the psychotherapy of children to the process of recovery following the survival of extreme conditions. She is the co-author of several theoretical and clinical papers on analytic self psychology with her husband, Dr. Paul H. Ornstein.
